Convoyer's Report: Arrived at the port of Lymington at 2am. Put water before the birds and turned in for the night. We were woken by a workman at around 5am to see if we wanted to go on the early ferry which was empty. We did and eventually arrived on site at Chale at 7.30am. We filled the drinkers with water. The weather was cold and it was cloudy – high clouds but excellent visibility. I liaised with the race advisor during the morning. The weather was improving and the clouds became more broken. It was agreed that we would liberate at 11.30am which we did. At this time, although it was total cloud, it was possible to see the position of the sun. There was very little wind and was difficult to get an accurate direction. I agree it was best to call it 'variable' but very light. The birds cleared the actual site very well and headed north. After some distance we could see they had broken into several groups and were some time before they were all lost from view – perhaps 10 minutes.
